Covers these lab items: Stone Therapy set

What it is used for

A stone therapy set contains stones used for massage or wellness treatments. Use clean, suitable stones at a safe temperature and follow the client's comfort and the treatment protocol.

How to use

1. Inspect stones and accessories for cracks, sharp edges, or damage.
2. Clean and disinfect reusable stones according to the material and product instructions.
3. For heated stones, use an approved heater and check each stone's temperature before application.
4. Explain the procedure and check for sensitivities or contraindications before treatment.
5. Position the client comfortably and test the stone on a suitable area first.
6. Apply stones gently using the approved technique and monitor the client's comfort continuously.
7. Remove stones promptly if discomfort, redness, or excessive heat occurs.
8. Clean, dry, and store stones after the treatment.

⚠ Safety

- Never apply stones that are excessively hot, cracked, or contaminated.
- Avoid placing heated stones on numb skin, injured areas, or areas with reduced sensation.
- Do not perform treatment where contraindications exist; seek qualified medical guidance when uncertain.
- Maintain hygiene and never share unclean stones between clients.

Care & storage

- Clean and disinfect stones after every client according to the product instructions.
- Store stones dry in a clean, protected container.
